A MOILED SHOULDER LINE ENHANCES BECOMINGLY STYLISH DAYTIME FROCK
A perfect fall frock which you may dress up with fairly elaborate accessories when the occasion demands or combine with tailored accessories for a sporty look. This all-occasion frock has a deep double pointed yoke which molds the shoulders its turn-down collar hugging the throat. Short puffed or longer full sleeves are smartly shirred at the yoke line while vertical skirt seams branch out at the hips and continue to the back where they end in a point. The new fall cottons synthetics and rayon are equally good.

READY MADE WIFE

BY CORALIE STANTON

CHAPTER 47
Glad she asked
"I followed you Laurie. As soon as the car turned the corner I got out. I couldn't let you go off like that. They told me at the office that you had called on Mr. Dallas. I—well I guess something was up. So I walked up and down outside and then came across this poor child."
"Thank God you were there," she said aloud.
And then in an immense relief of feeling she spoke again, "I love him! I love him! He is the finest man in the world. How can I go on living? How can I?"
Laurie and Gladys came back to London by train and boat.
A shock awaited them when they reached the Chelsea flat for the first time. Mrs. Moore had been in a motor accident, and was seriously injured. They had rung up from a nursing home to say that Mrs. Steele was waiting for him. She wanted to see him very urgently.
He drove immediately to the address and saw from the face of the woman who received him that Wanda must be very ill indeed.
There is no hope, the matron said. She is barely conscious. A spinal injury. If she lived it would be a cripple.
In silence he told in the room and looked down with sad self a painful eyes at the grey face on the pillows.
He thought she was unconscious and did not speak.
She is slipping away, the matron whispered. Say something to her. She wanted so much to see you.
Wanda, he said gently. Wanda dear I am here.
It took a perceptible time but his voice reached her and brought her back to earth for a few seconds from the other side.
She opened her eyes she tried to move.
"Darling it was a threat of a voice wandering uncertainly. It hardly seemed to come from the woman on the bed.
He tried to stammer out conventional savings about going home but she said, "What was there behind his eyes? That gave his words such a sinister meaning."
On the face of it he was in the right. She had given him her word and broken it. And she could not explain. She felt actually that she would rather die than explain. But their bargain that was another matter which was his life.
I have settled in business, he went on and now he was the small, ardent-eyed lover on the point of achieving his desire. So there is nothing to wait for. I am going to take a holiday entirely away from business. I have a place in France not far from Paris. We will go over and be married there and then we will tour through Spain for our honeymoon.
And when I have come back here you will stay in some quiet little place and I will come over every week end. Mortimer is going to work things when he gets back to Australia. I can trust him. He will manage it so that we can announce that you have divorced Rex Moore down there where you were married.
So you see it's all fixed up. Can't you leave London in the middle of next week? Don't bother about anything in the way of clothes. You can do your shopping in Paris. I shall have to go over a few days before to arrange about the wedding. Laurie Laurie. My lovely girl!
His voice changed to passionate exultation. He took her in his arms. She was caught in the merciless spokes of the wheel of life. She was helpless. She could only submit.
Next week she would be Mark Albert's wife. And life would be over for her.
Wanda Steele was hurried in England according to her wishes and the cabled confirmation of her nearest relative a brother in New York.
After the funeral Rex Moore learned the meaning of those last words that she had breathed.

Married Comrades

BY ADELE GARRISON

Mother Graham is incensed at being warned to silence.

ALTHOUGH we had hoped to keep the identity of Jack Leslie's secret from Mother Graham as well as from Katie and the small boys, I had seen immediately upon my mother-in-law's appearance on the stairs that we must abandon the hope. But I deeply regretted the necessity of uttering Jack Leslie's name when I saw Dicky's mother reel slightly and throw her hands up to her head with the gasp which we know means "don't say that."

Jack Leslie, she repeated.

As I took a step toward her, "I'm all right I don't need any thing. But tell me at once what that man is doing here. Is he trying to find Mary?"

Yes, Mother, that is exactly what he is doing. He is trying to find Mary. But he hasn't been successful and he won't be. It is day after day and as soon as the state troopers can get him down from that tree he will be taken straight to jail and kept there until some other one on charges of trying to break in here. I'll Dicky can find other charges against him. He is sure there are many."

Her Secret Disclosed

She passed her hands over her forehead in dazed fashion.

It is all so bewildering, she said and then with a pitiful remnant of her lucidity she said, "Tell me the whole but I won't keep anything back."

I obeyed her scrupulously while we watched the path outside the door.

That had been acting for her who besides himself her maid and her chauffeur were the only ones who drove him back from the little country churchyard of the village, that her family had originally come from and asked him to come into his office.

Here he revealed the fact that Mrs. Steele had made a fresh will the day before her accident in which she had left him nearly the whole of her property in California and securities that would bring him in a very comfortable income.

Reverend was overwhelmed. His first thought was that he would be independent of Mark Albert. He felt an inexpressible gratitude to the dead woman who had demon strated her love for him beyond the grave.

Everything was in perfect order. The lawyer assured him. He had exchanged cables with Mrs. Steele's men of business in California and with her brother. There could be no question about the validity of the will.

Just then went out dazed into the hot July afternoon. He felt humble so unworthy of the trust won in a great life.

He walked swiftly through the streets not only a free but a rich man.

The next day an even greater blessing was bestowed on Rex Moore. On making a visit to the famous eye specialist he was told by the great man:

I can find no more trace of the trouble. Mr. Moore, I am happy to pronounce you completely cured.

quarantine and know how important it is to follow the rules laid down by the local board of health. Yet there are many persons who without meaning any wrong fall to follow these rules. Such carelessness is a menace to the community.

For example many mothers who after measles and whooping cough as minor ailments. They are so lenient in regard to quarantine of the sick child.

Serious complications such as scarlet fever, diphtheria and infection of the eye often follow diseases like scarlet fever and diphtheria. Many cases of pneumonia are caused by scarlet fever. In leaving the sick room before they have been completely recovered from a so-called minor disease. Most of these consequences would be escaped if quarantine were strictly enforced.

I can readily understand how great is the temptation to break quarantine regulations. It is only when the disease is progressing without any serious complications that it is all well up and around. As soon as he exposes himself to the possibility of catching it, all his senses are aroused.

This danger is especially great in children. Most of the so-called childhood diseases are not of themselves without danger. It is in the complications of the disease that the danger lies.

To prevent serious complications and prolong recovery, follow the instructions as to quarantine.

are opposing a popular conviction that relief should be administered at the lowest cost possible. To the majority of citizens there always has been something ludicrous in the practice of stalling in protest against relief grants. It is that conviction with which organized labor must deal in the attack it has started on the federal relief policy. There is right on both sides, but under the circumstances organized labor leaders seem to be assuming there is more right on their side than popular judgment will grant to them. The problem isn't to maintain a particular theory of wages, but to provide relief benefits for distressed citizens.

No Compulsion.

It is, or should be, clear to all relief beneficiaries eligible for work relief that the government cannot compel them to accept jobs. But, it should be equally clear that they cannot compel the government to support them unless they are willing to cooperate.

History informs that when the colonies were being established in this country one of the most vexing problems was raised by settlers who couldn't see any reason for cooperating on terms laid down by the majority of their brothers and sisters. Such persons were dealt with directly, by confronting them with a choice between working and doing without relief.

That was before the time of systematic social welfare. Human relationships were on a lower plane, perhaps. Life, itself, was not a matter of choosing between bread and cake but of fighting to ward off starvation. America was only a land of plenty in the dreams of the exploiters back in Europe in those early days.

Still, it's possible that fundamentalists don't change so greatly in the space of a few centuries. They may be described in softer terms, but the same things are meant. The United States has organized a great cooperative effort to maintain life in a period of difficulty. Citizens who are able to work are expected to work to help in the support of those who are unable to work.

The plan for relieving unemployment and indigency is far from perfect. It is, nevertheless, the best the country has been able to devise. Cooperation can make it work after a fashion; any plan will work if it is made to work. With politeness and aid, the government's dictum to unemployed citizens who don't want to work on any terms but their own is: Work or don't eat. No better answer for complainers than that one has been thought of yet.

The death of Charles V. Truax, representative-at-large from Ohio, naturally raises the question of his successor. Ohio, with only 22 congressional districts, is entitled to 23 congressmen. Mr. Truax and Rep. Stephen M. Young were elected in 1931 to represent the whole state.

Because Rep. Truax was a Democrat, much interest is attached to the possibility that he might be replaced in a special election by a Republican. Many Ohio residents would welcome an opportunity to try to prove the new deal's recent defeat in Rhode Island's first congressional district was not an isolated demonstration of disapproval.

But there are several reasons why Ohio should think carefully before replacing Rep. Truax. The best one is the secretary of state's estimate that a special primary would cost the state $600,000. That's a lot of money to pay for the privilege of having 24 instead of 23 congressmen, particularly in view of the fact the 24th congressman would represent no district. Ohio should ask itself whether or not the game would be worth the candle.

Rep. Truax's death raises the question as to why the general assembly has not redistricted the state so as to eliminate congressional-at-large. By waiting until the next congressional election to replace Rep. Truax, the state would have time to perform this neglected duty. It would save half a million dollars. It would escape the needless excitement of an election that would be magnified out of all proportion to its importance by interest in the new deal's ability to command support at the polls. Under the circumstances, a special primary to nominate candidates for representative-at-large would be impossible to justify. Ohio has far better uses for its money, time and energy.

Prevailing Wage Issue.

Organized labor, seeking to protect certain wage levels, threatens to paralyze an important part of the federal work relief program with strikes to protest against payment of less than prevailing wage levels to relief beneficiaries. The New York City strike against work relief wage schedules is the outstanding wedge.

This is the issue which was fought so bitterly in the senate during debate on the McCarran prevailing wage amendment to the work relief bill. A compromise was effected finally that left responsibility for determination of satisfactory wages to President Roosevelt. At the time, it was foreseen there would be further attempts to batter down the administration's relief wage policy, the New York strike fulfills an expectation.

The administration's policy is that relief wages should be lower than prevailing wages in private employment in order to maintain a differential in favor of private wages. Organized labor's policy is that relief wage levels should be equal to private wage levels in order to prevent lowering of private wage levels. Apparently, the fact a relief beneficiary is able to earn as much or more money by working more hours at a lower wage than by working less hours at a higher wage is not an important consideration for the leaders of organized labor. They are not interested in the government's problem, but only in their own.

Obviously, they cannot command wide

O. O. McIntyre
New York Day by Day

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—Gelett Burgess has rounded in from Paris after an absence of nine years. Nearing 60, he is one of those eternally merry fellows whose nimble mind has sparked some of the finest nonsense and philosophical musings in American literature.

His Purple Cow poem has lingered longer than perhaps a passing rhyme of any period. His terming of anything trite as "a bromide" has, of course, become a part of the language. As well as mulling a half-hundred other conlangs such as "huzzie-doo" and "acumeter."

Boston born, he started out an engineer and was an instructor in topographical drawing and a designer for some years, until in a frollic moment he began editing "The Lark" in San Francisco. Here his flair for unusual phrasing and word tricks attracted eastern editors.

During his exile in Paris he had an apartment on Boulevard Raspail near Du Dome and Rodotone in the heart of the Latin Quarter. Here he has written successful novels and been the associate of such intellectual giants as Abbe Delmont, James Joyce and others.

Few have so completely reversed their manner of living as William Macfarlane, the novelist. He was for years one of the most secluded of his guild, living bachelor fashion in a New York cloister from which he rarely emerged save to visit editors. Among intimates he was known as Fireale Bill, with a fierce hatred for anything outdoors.

A few years ago and with violent protest he was persuaded by his brother-in-law, Edwin Belmer, to play his first game of golf. The innovation was an astonishing success. From that day he has been up at dawn and off to the links. He moved from town to Westchester, tramped through the woods, ridged horseback and only visits the city when forced by business.

A gentleman with an older day hallojah for the Richard Carle type of comedian confides: "Where may one find another cadaverous Carle dancing, his waltzer's tray aloft about with a wineglass humbug and bringing up with a spit-wind stop before his wife head-room down just as she opened, Ah, my friend that was real theater!"

Another slim and bald light comedian of the Carle era was Ralph Hertz. A Venetian, as I recall, he, although older had the feather-footed daintiness of Fred Astaire, seemingly able to float over chairs, divans and tables as he waltzed his partner in put-ball swoops about the stage. He was Alaire's build and physiognomy, too.

Peter B. Kyne is latest of established writers to take a whirl at a punch-the-clock routine in the Hollywood studio. He will continue to turn out short stories, and after a disciplinary stretch of office routine attending conferences and all the rigmarole, he will, of course, go back to full-length novels.

Greenwich Village has followed uptown New York in going almost completely catfish. While Madame Hortoluthin table d'hôte along with a few other, half-baked red ink sanctimonies are still maintained, the expansion of the village's avant-garde places are filled with the long and short-haired, bandied, smoked and surface brilliant types of the 35 cent basement dinner places. One edging Sheridan Square is in high favor of the moment and a rendezvous for the alibi-cute, the hawkers of radical tactics, Russian dignitaries and sculpted geese.

Today's fashion note: A waitress in a CHIN in West 59th street trying to sharpen a hard pencil with a dull table knife.

The back-slapping, Rocco Pruckow discovers that Ambrose Bierce included in his ceaseless an amusing gift for cartooning. While a sub-treasury watchman in San Francisco he drew a faucial relief of the political finches of the day for fellow employees' amusement. They fell into other hands and were lithographed and embossed over the city. Some one sent Bierce anonymously a check for $400 but he refused to draw another cartoon.

Glancing Backward

TEN YEARS AGO

It was Thursday, Aug. 13, 1925. Fish were dying in McKinley park lake by the hundreds as the result of oil having been washed into the water from Lake street and Elmwood drive by a heavy rain.

The Marion Auto club was incorporated under the state law. Signers for incorporation papers were Dr. J. W. McIntyre, Benjamin F. Blinn, George Wyandot, Dr. D. W. Brown, Dr. J. W. Tanner, Clifford B. Stall and C. W. McClain.

Behind The News In Washington And Wall Street

BY PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—The first thing that baby politicians learn in the smoking room kindergarten is never to vote for taxes before an election. Conversely, grant politics nearly keeled over when they read that the new deal senators on the finance committee voted for the Roosevelt program imposing an unprecedented burden on nearly everyone earning a living.

Even opposition strategists have always agreed that the original new deal technique of spending now and paying later was the smartest ever. It was obviously shrewd to wait until after the next election before arriving at the day of taxation reckoning.

They thought it was bad enough when President Roosevelt suggested taxing the few rich who always furnish campaign contributions, but were consoled by the fact that the idea was supposed to be popular with the many poor. But when the New Deal senators sponsored a plan asking every jobless man to pay income taxes, it just did not make sense. In fact, it was privately suggested that the lobby committee recall the now apologetic New Jersey advertising man and ask him what he thinks of the Senate finance committee.

That may not be necessary. If you will wait a week, you will see that these boys may not be quite as dizzy or as daffy as they seem. It is necessary to act for the next few days.

The explanation behind this clowning may be found in the very bad news in which Mr. Roosevelt's original proposal has become involved. From the beginning the major stumbling block has been eager young Senator La Follette. The power that he has thought it advisable to appease him by along the way. They kept him from trying to wreck several bills with tax amendments by promising to give his ideas a try-out when this tax bill came along.

If they had not accepted his unwanted program in committee, an open fight of possibly six weeks duration would have resulted. As it is, Senator La Follette will be a leading spokesman for the bill, which is now considered to be so bad from a political standpoint that it will cause a popular reaction.

Of course, the real bill will be written later when the house and senate conferees get together in private and seek to adjust the differences in their two measures. It is a good thing that the Roosevelt program will be modified 75 per cent or more by the conferees, or else there would be no bill at all. Few new dealers would cry about that, either.

Sanctions. State departmentists will hold up their hands in horror if you suggest that they have invoked economic sanctions against Italy, but they have. It was done intentionally in a way which was ambiguous enough to be clever.

The Export-Import bank issued an unneeded announcement a few days back that it would not consider any further applications for credits involving Italy in view of the uncertain conditions in that country. If you press bank officials they will privately state that Mussolini's promised war against Ethiopia hurt the lira so much that he is not considered a good credit risk. That is true, and is reason enough, but there is another.

The fact is that the same action would have been reached if the lira were found. Our diplomats agreed unanimously among themselves that they would prevent American dollars from being used in any way to finance Mussolini's conquest.

The situation arose over efforts of American cotton manufacturers to obtain credits with which to finance shipment of cotton goods to Italy. Exporters sought six months' credit from New York bankers. The banks refused any

Arthur Brisbane's News Review

New York's strike of union against President Roosevelt. Johnson and WPA. When temporarily to have collapsed. Meany, New York labor leader, fore leaving town for the weekend, said all union men would out and stay out and men would follow. The day that the nonunion men did not work, and the union men went to work.

Robert Moses of the park department, who employs 2,500 men on park projects, reports 110 deserters.

Mr. Hoover's Question. Former President Hoover's friends that they ask President Roosevelt what he means is about changing the Constitution what he would change.

In Chicago Mr. Hoover said would be better for liberty to let suicide in the open than to let it be hidden. President Roosevelt has a way of saying anything when he is interested, most annoying to his listeners.

The President, when coming home, will start for the exposition at San Diego, California and the Pacific coast. Perfect highways, railroads, planes.

Magie Island Found. For two hundred years have related legends about mysterious islands in the Arctic. priceless furs and minerals. When Peter Wright, an American, found the island, he sent his men to find them. workers in his mines, he said. political and other crimes. chained to their wheelbarrows. till they died. What would more labor say to that?

Stalin's Russia, earnestly developing gold deposits, now produces more than three times as much gold as the United States. Moraw announces that a Russian airplane, which other countries were slowly on dog sleds, has located the mysterious "Andromeda" Island. Russia's best pilot, Ivan Molekov, will fly to claim the island for Russia. In the last few years various expeditions have tried and failed to find the lands. An American, De Long, attempting the discovery, starved to death on an ice floe.

War, The Last Blood Drop. War talk continues. Mr. Roosevelt announces a new air weapon, a "whispering powerful," but doesn't say what it is. Plain TNT is poison gas is powerful enough. Hitler, announcing that Germany is ready to meet any challenge, adds: "No power on earth can attack us." That seems a little overconfident. Two quotations are recommended to him: French, "Nul de nous se croit invincible avant son dernier jour." ("No man can call himself invincible until his last day"); the other, "Dieu kann mein Mund nicht gluecklich sprechen, so best of Feindes Auge wacht." Just translated, "My mouth cannot pronounce you happy as long as your enemy's eye watches."

A possible financial panic suggests that the public debt, Germany has been increased twenty thousand million marks. That might represent an enemy of considerable proportions.

Inheritor Wisdom. The Ethiopian emperor, descendant of King Solomon, seems to inherit his ancestor's wisdom, warns his people to depend on the tongue of snakes but prepare to shed their own drop of blood. He promises lead them in person against devilish invaders.

"Devilish" is not too strong word, as the wild tribes of Ethiopia will realize when they see their own people with teeth as wild lions and elvish cats.

There is no doubt of the courage of Ethiopia's emperor, 600,000 men whom he has organized. The difficulty is that he will be on the ground, with Mussolini will come through the air.

Startling Japan. Japan's action in the south seas times to us westerners. It is seen brutal. A group of young men, a high official, murdered him, and thousands of sympathizers demand that they be pardoned.

In Tokyo, yesterday, Mr. Nagata, chief of the Japanese rear of military affairs, was derailed, with a sword of Lieut. Jazawa. Why, is not known. Gen. Nagata, important Japanese official, who announced that Japan would not look on any difference if Italy went into general to Lieutenant Nagata. Immediately after his murder these officers are always present when killed in performance of duty. In China, is not only made nobly self, but this great-great-grandfather and all his posterity are ennobled, in order to gain a fine ancestral tree.

A SNAKE HUNT. Concerned hunters, which now be called "drive," frequently resorted to the plains of Ohio when the country new, to rid it of prairie and other animals. But only a few of such a hunt directed against snakes.

When Trumbull county was settled, rattlesnakes abounded. Mr. Oviatt, who knew about reptiles and their habits, led the hunt against them. He led the settlers against the total of 400 snakes which Oviatt carried on his
